##CURRENT_DATE##

Dear ##PROLE_AUTHOR_SALUTATION## ##PROLE_AUTHOR_LASTNAME##,

Congratulations on the acceptance of your article entitled "##DOCUMENT_TITLE##".

##JOURNAL_NAME## is an open access journal, meaning that your article will be openly available to all online, without subscription barriers, and published under a Creative Commons licence of your choosing.

The journal relies on the costs of publication being paid for by the institutions/funders associated with the research. We recognise that the funding circumstances of our authors vary, and we are committed to ensuring that no author faces a financial barrier to open access publication. Cambridge provides a variety of options to manage these costs, designed to guarantee the journal remains open for all, while at the same time ensuring its financial sustainability by making use of open access funding where available.

- A) If you are affiliated with an institution with an active open access publishing agreement with Cambridge (based on the information you provided at submission), in the majority of cases this will cover the costs of publication and Cambridge will liaise directly with your institution to determine eligibility and secure this funding. You can use this tool to determine your likely eligibility.
- B) If you are not covered by an open access publishing agreement but your research was funded by a grant or third-party funder that supports APCs, or there is APC funding available at your institution, you will be asked to pay an APC out of those funds.
- C) Waivers are automatically applied for authors from a number of low- or middle- income countries. See our waivers and discounts page for further details and to see whether you're eligible.

If none of the above is open to you and you have no access to funding for publications, we invite you now to fill in a short form to request a full or partial waiver. You will then be provided with a code that you can use in the Rightslink portal where APC payment is coordinated, confirming that the journal will cover the costs of publication for you.

Thank you for supporting this process, which helps Journal X make your research accessible to the broadest possible audience, whilst protecting the quality of our editorial and publishing processes.

For additional information on this process, please visit our Publishing Open Access information page.

Signing your Publishing Agreement

In order to publish your article, you will need to grant Cambridge University Press a non-exclusive licence to publish. This will not affect the ownership of the copyright in your article, which will remain unchanged. If you have not already done so, you will shortly hear from our digital licensing partner Ironclad in order to complete your licence agreement for publication via email at this email address. Your manuscript will not enter our post-acceptance workflow until we have received the signed licence. Please ensure you check all email folders including your junk and spam folders. If you do not receive this email within the next couple of days, please contact:

authorcontracts\_journals@cambridge.org

Please see here some FAQs to support you with filling in the 'information request form' required to generate your publishing agreement.

Sincerely,

Author publishing agreement

Before Cambridge University Press can publish a journal article (or any other journal content type) we need a signed licence to publish. To find the right form, start by considering whether or not your article will be published as open access or non-open access and then select the most appropriate option.

Open Access Articles

So that we have the necessary rights to publish your article, we ask you to grant a non-exclusive licence to publish. (We do not ask you to transfer your copyright to us.) A non-exclusive licence means that the rights needed to publish the paper are granted to the journal owner on a non-exclusive basis and the ownership of the copyright remains unchanged. Select the correct form from the choice of two in the table below.

In open access there is a fundamental principle that content should not only be accessible but also be freely reusable for the good of research and humanity. We comply with this principle by asking you to select, within your form, a Creative Commons licence. The CC licence you choose will determine how readers can use your article.

Who are you and who owns the copyright?	Correct Forms	Who Signs?
I am the sole author and I own the copyright in the article OR I am one of two or more authors and we jointly own the copyright in the article		One author
I am the sole author and my employer (government or non-government) owns the copyright in the article OR I am one of two or more authors and one or more of our employers (government or non-government) jointly own the copyright in the article		Each author and each employer

If a contract has been processed on Ironclad, authors will amend their original agreement.
